it's the end of a long road

...but you made it!

Students at UMass Boston quite often deal with things not typical to the lives of students at other colleges and universities--between balancing part- and full-time jobs, families, long commutes, copious amounts of classwork and the ever-important sleep, graduating can take much longer than the typical four years.

But it's a great feeling when you finally make it out.

After long semesters, cramming for exams and pumping out papers like it was your job, it's finally time for you!

Some may go on to graduate school; others may join the workforce immediately. Life is now on your terms, and you should feel empowered. You've made it through one of the toughest, yet most amazing, periods in your life.

You're a college graduate.

And you deserve it.

Open House 2008

With more than 100 active recognized student organizations on campus, UMass Boston's open house is loaded with tables of information and people willing to fill you in on their group or club. Held shortly after the beginning of the school year, it's a great way for students to figure out ways to get involved during their undergraduate careers.

Students of all grade levels, ages and every other classification under the sun get together early in the morning to showcase for the public just what it's like to attend school at UMass Boston.

Harbor Art Gallery

Harbor Art Gallery, UMass Boston's connection to the arts located in the McCormack building, hosted a plethora of of unique exhibits during the school year. The gallery opened the school year with "Deconstructed," an exhibit featuring intricate drawings of architecture by Israeli artist Yossi Veissid. Veissid's drawings show people transforming into buildings, and buildings transforming into people, with furniture and recognizable landscapes thrown into the mix. Drawn on watercolor paper with artists' pens, Veissid's artwork was displayed at at least half of the original size, with the magnitude of the original drawings too large for the gallery's space. The exhibit ran from September 2 to October 1, with the artist's reception held on September 11 (Veissid pictured left). After displaying Veissid's intricate "Deconstruction," which caught the curious eyes of many on campus (bottom), the Harbor Art Gallery went on to display an abstract art exhibit titled "Color Pattern Structure" organized by Professor Bartek Walicki which featured many local artists, including Walicki. Proceeding "Color Pattern Structure" was a pottery and ceramics exhibit featuring MIT artists Robert Boyer and Leili Towfigh, which was a departure from the typical exhibits of Harbor Art Gallery which as usually focused on two-dimensional pieces.

Welcome Week

2008

Convoca

After giving a speech about the course of the school year and what he intends to put into motion for UMass Boston with the help of the students, Chancellor Keith Motley and various members of the administration hosted a free lunch on the Campus Center lawn for the students.

Vice Chancellor for Health Services Kathleen Golden-McAndrew took some shade and got health with a Vitamin Energy Drink (01), while Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Patrick Day served his students...their choice of pasta salads (02).

Meanwhile, the grill attendant prepared dozens of hamburgers for students who love free food (03). And, the hardworking Chancellor Motely doled out the plates and sampled some soda (04).

BELOW: Lines like this one dominated the Campus Center lawn for quite some time throughout the day. While the free lunch event started off with a slow turn out, by the time mid-afternoon classes let out, students skipped the cafeteria and grabbed a burger and a hot dog otuside.

Halloween Party 2008

Halloween's draw is the allure of crazy, fun costumes and obscene amounts of candy. Some of the students at UMass Bosotn held a Halloween party in McCormack's Ryan Lounge (01), complete with a "Gold Digger" decked out in gold lamee looking for "donations" (02).

Plenty of students came in plain street clothes looking ironic since it was a costume party, but one student wouldn't let that interrupt the swagger of his all-black ensemble, complete with decorated cane (03).

Of course, there is always someone looking to steal the show (04).

After a month-long break, it's always hard to come back to school. So, to ease the pain, and the cold weather, SAEC displayed events to look forward to during the week (01), distributed flyers (02) and had plenty of free stuff to ease the sting of reality that is college (03), (06).

The administration gave away free UMass Boston ski caps, with Chancellor Motley even passing a few into students' hands. They also had free coffee, hot chocolate and light breakfast foods, always a hit first thing in the morning (05).

Deval Patrick at UMass Boston

Massachusetts Governor Deval Patrick showed up at UMass Boston for a press conference on March 24, 2009 to discuss money that the state set aside for state colleges and universities, and how much money was allocated for the University of Massachusetts system. The news was welcomed by all as there was a threat of a $1,300 fee increase looming over students' heads.

Chancellor Keith Motley addressed the crowd first, with UMass Boston students filling the empty spaces of the stage on either side. The news that Patrick delivered saved many jobs that were looking at being cut, as well as addressing how Federal stimulus money affected financial aid.

The money returned many schools to their previous operating budgets before Patrick proposed decreasing their funding in budget cuts earlier in the year.

Queer Student Center

01.

02

UMass Boston's Queer Student Center took part in the city of Boston's Pride Parade for the first time during Pride Week, June 5-14. The parade, held June 13, made its way through Boston displaying the week's theme of "Trans-forming Our Community," declaring the need for support of transgendered individuals.

QSC followed the parade route along with many diverse supporters and groups, including the MSPCA, many Unitarian Universalist churches, city of Boston mayoral candidates and the ACLU of Massachusetts.

The float they constructed consisted of water waves on both sides with pink and purple pillars and a lighthouse, also known as a beacon, in the center.

LUX Release Party

LUX, UMass Boston's student magazine published once a semester, was launched on May 13, providing the student body with a full-color glossy with stories about a student's trip to Peru, an interview with a profession skier-turned-honors student and a collection of six-word stories from students, professors and even some famous people. The magazine, which used to be an honor's newsletter, relaunched in 2006

The release party was held in the Harbor Art Gallery.

End of Spring 2009

Once again, after the excitement of the school year beginning, getting bored with classes and trudging through exams, the end of the school year jumps upon us!

To commemorate that, SAEC brought a giant, inflatable lazer tag complete with green alien to campus, along with a few more inflatable big toys for big kids and the ever-popular airbrush artist with free customzied trucker hats.

While kicking off the end of the semester on campus may sound like a drag, who can ignore the allure of seeing a massive green thing on the Campus Center lawn?

FROM TOP LEFT: 01. The giant green alien housed lazer tag, which always draws a crowd. Groups of students wait their turn to enter and shoot harmless guns at one another.
02. Two UMass Boston students finish the inflatable obstacle course and have just enough breath left in them to smile.

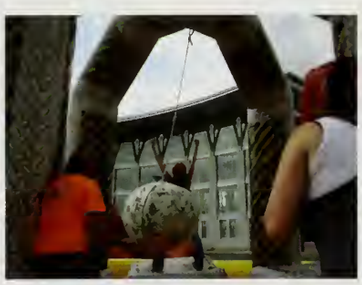
1. The Wrecking Ball and four tudents prepare to do battle.

02. The ball changes hands in the inflatable dome.



03. Gearing up for a swing of the ball across the wrecking ball's home.

04. Great success! Damage averted and wrecking ball defeated.

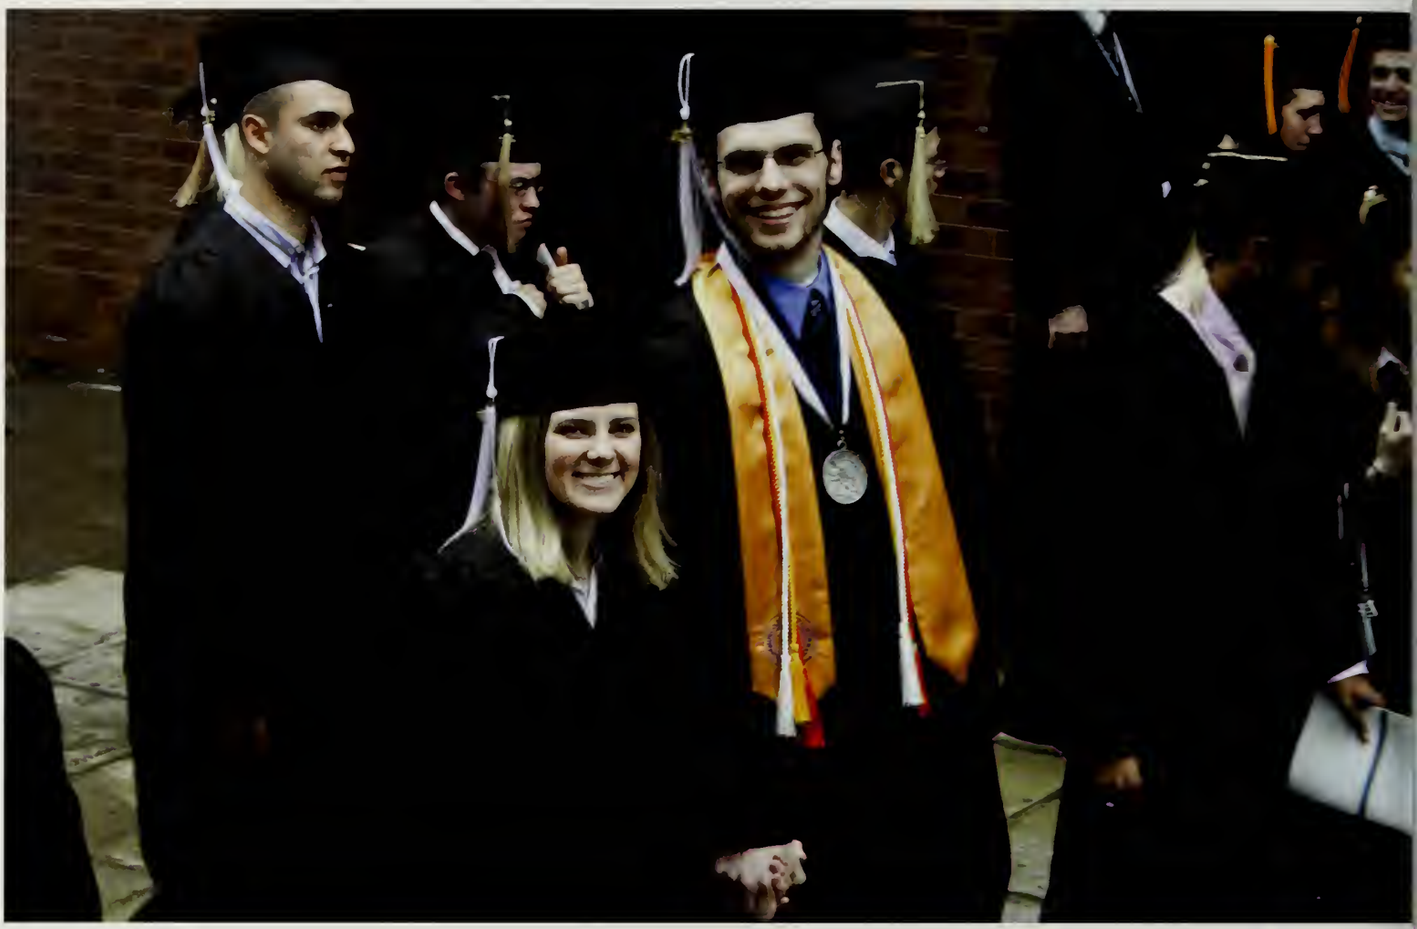
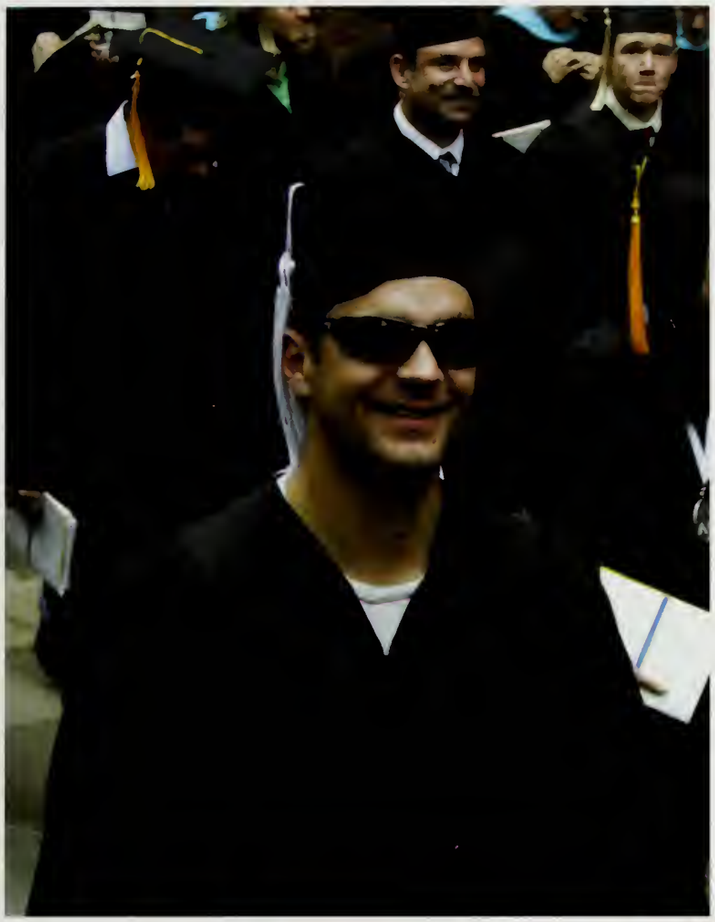
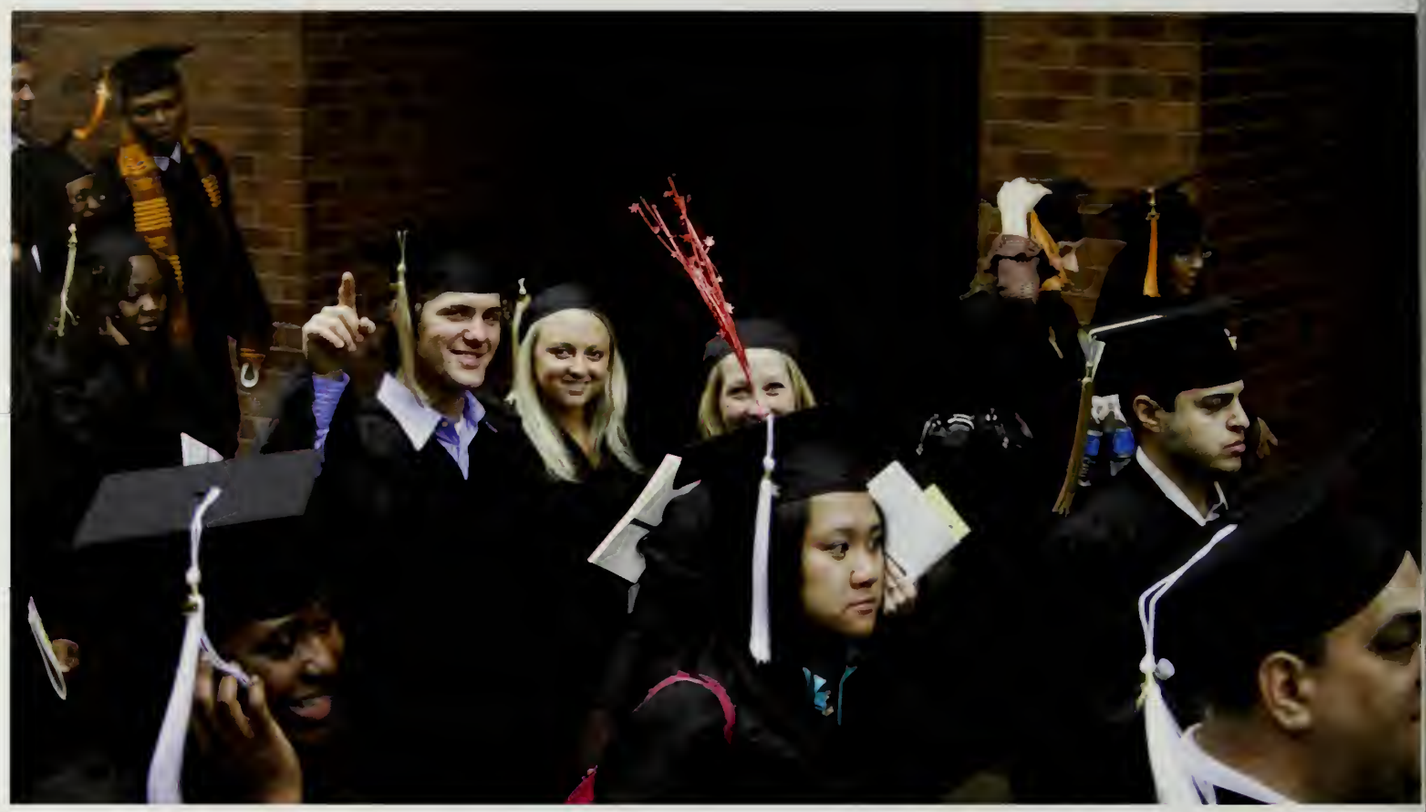
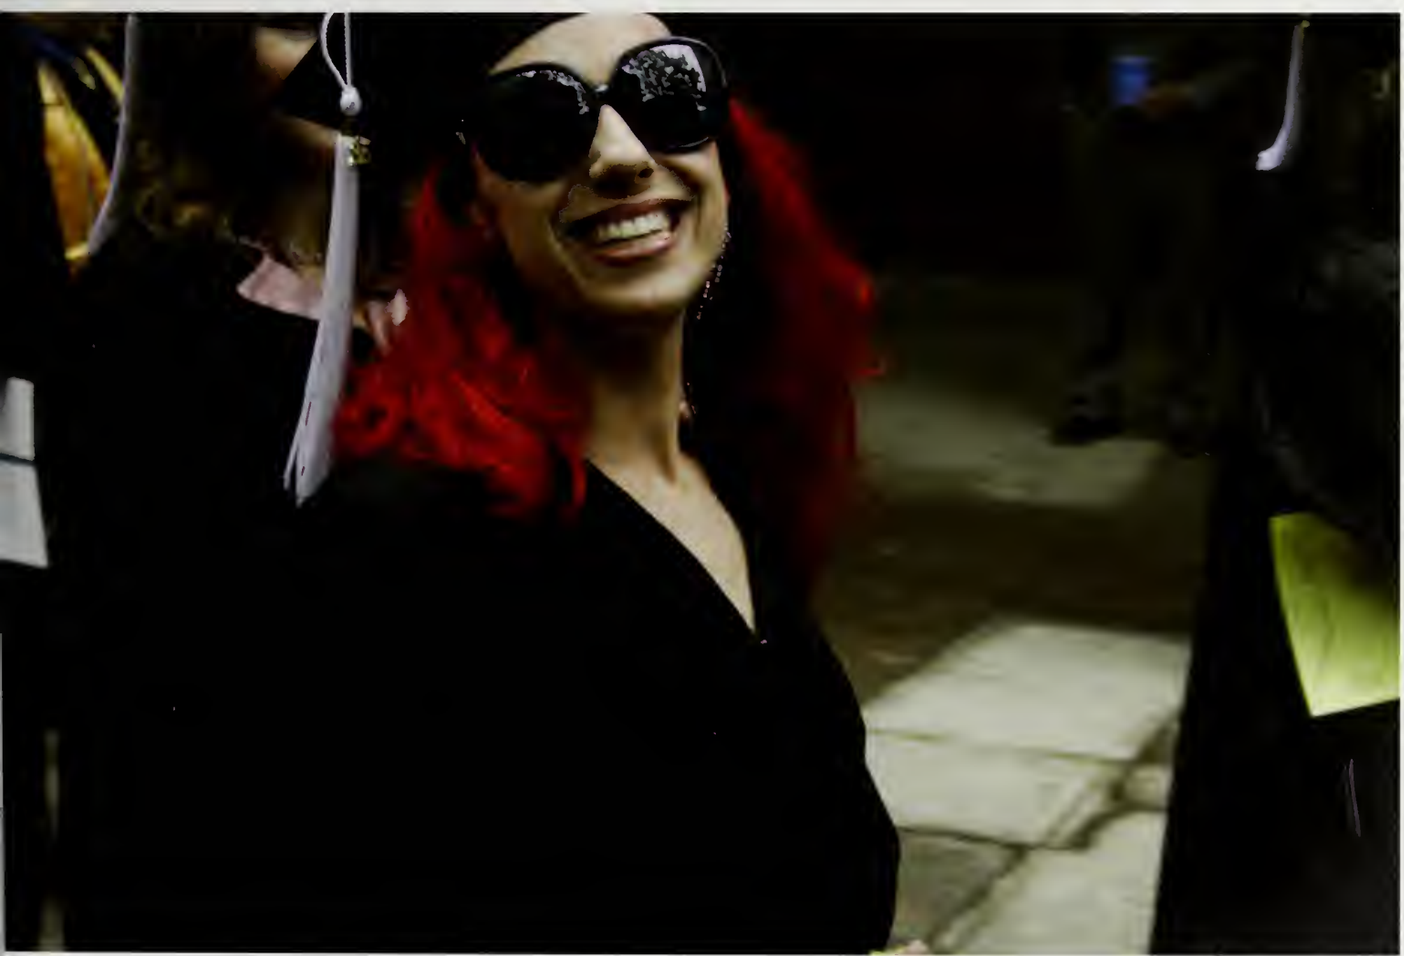
2009

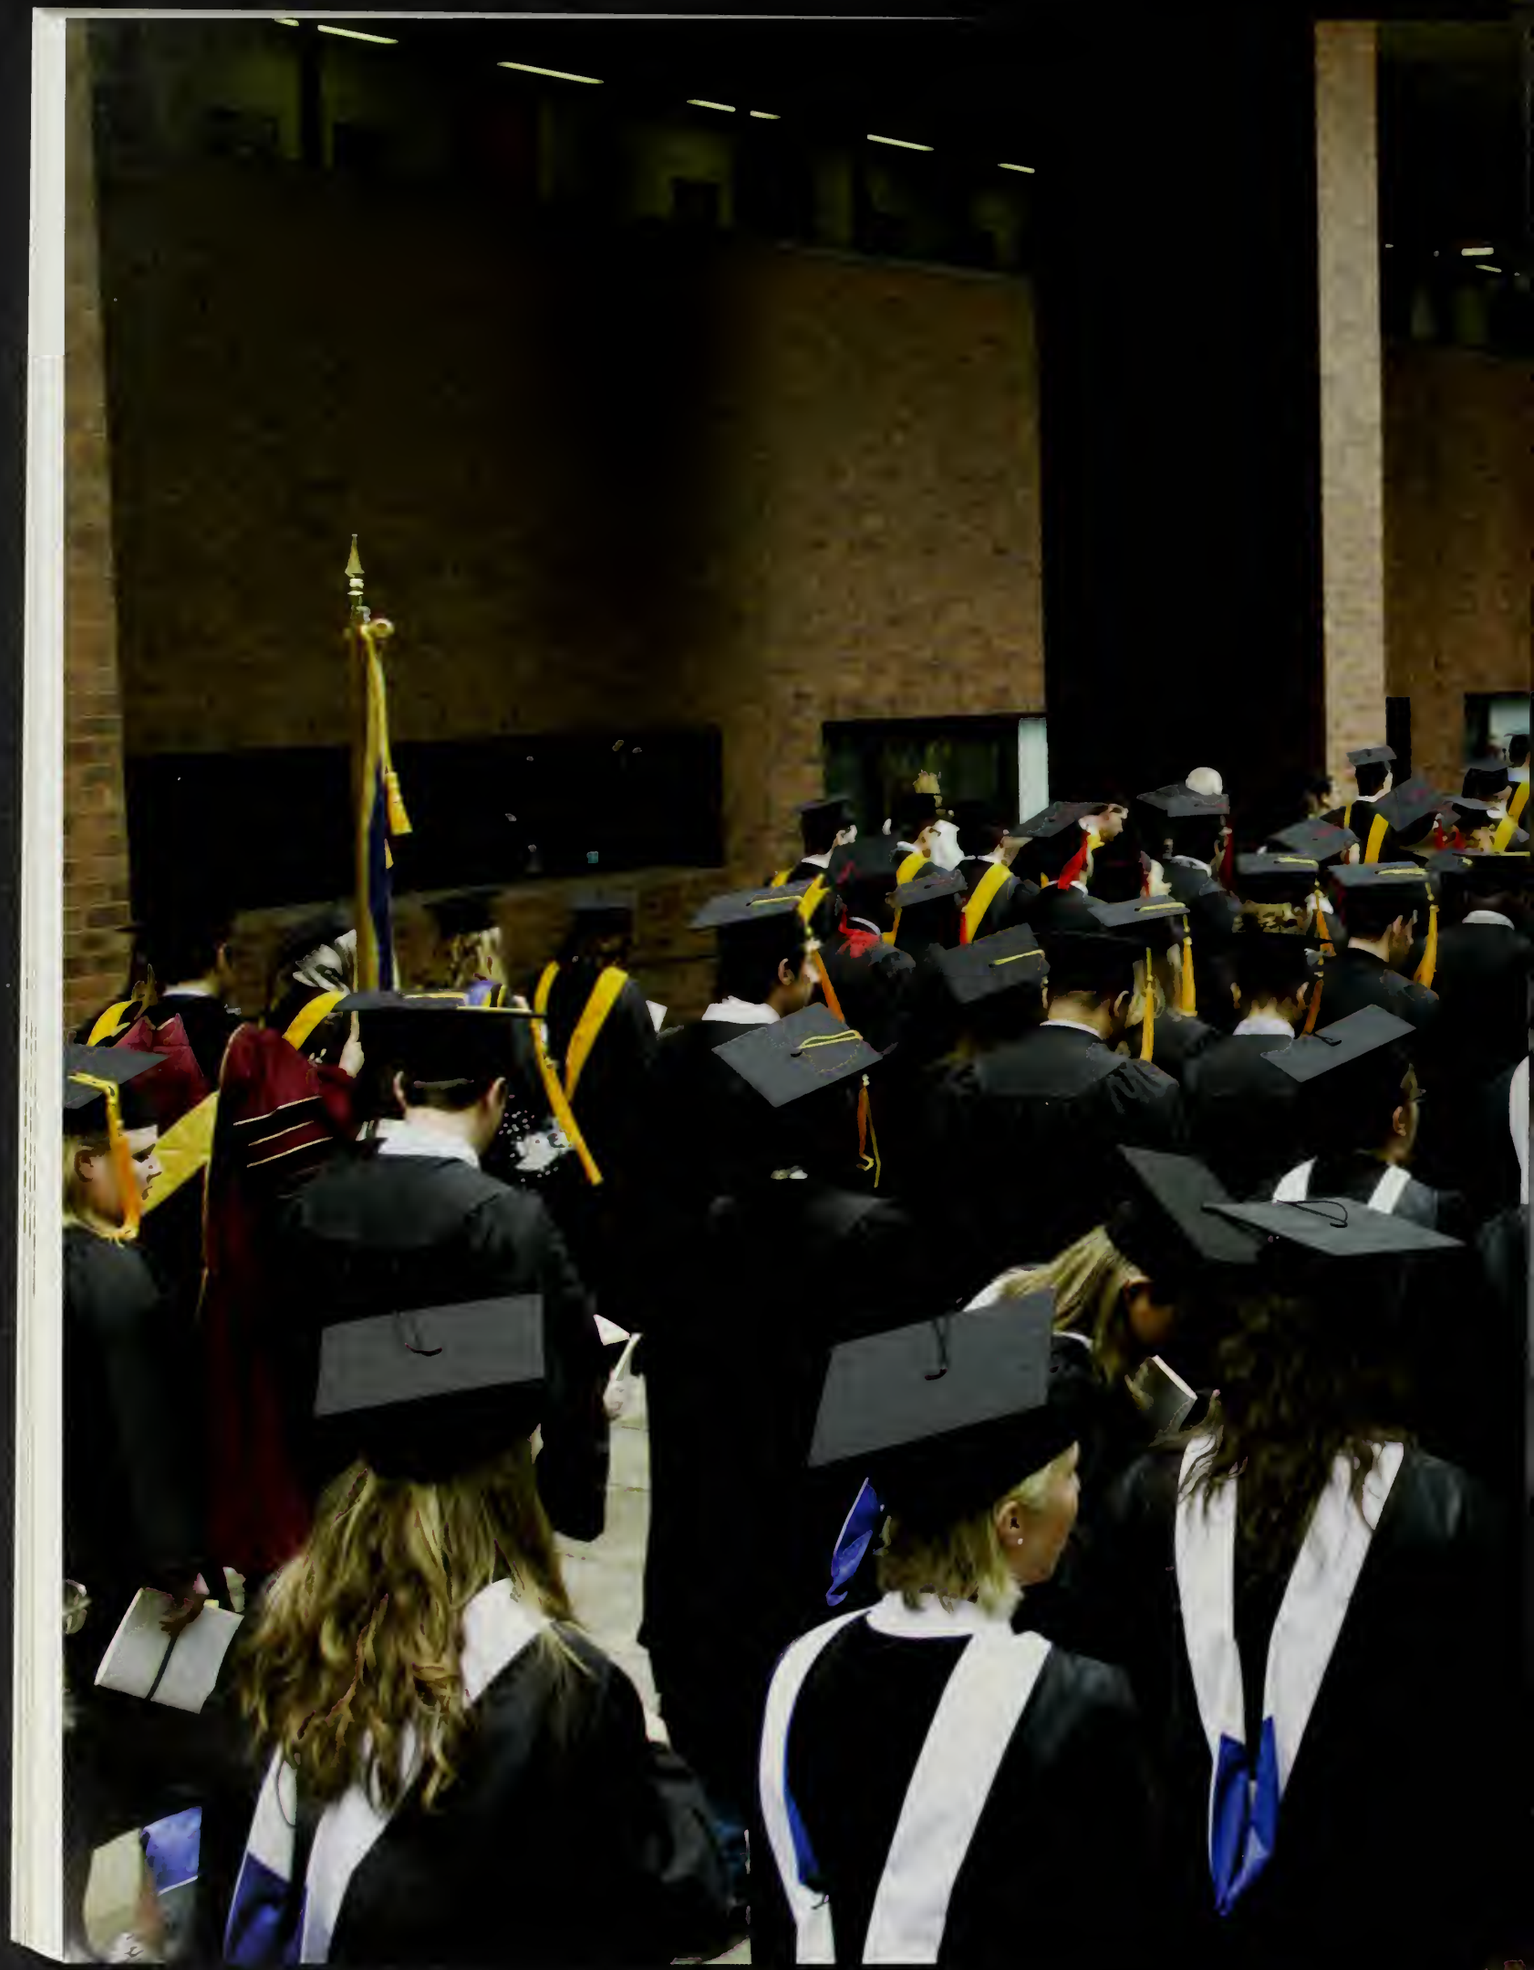








Congrats
GRAD



The UMass Boston Yearbook staff would like to thank:
Donna Neal, UMass Boston Yearbook adviser
Michelle Sidwell at Walsworth Publishing
Edson Bueno, The Mass Media
Wil Kilburn, UMass Boston Communications
Alan Wickstrom, UMass Boston Athletics
Samantha Rincon, SAEC
DaVor/Herff Jones Photography and all 2009 graduating seniors who got their portraits taken

About the 2009 Beacon:
This edition of the UMass Boston Beacon was produced in Adobe InDesign CS3 on an iMac. The cover, divider, headline and senior name font is Plantagenet Cherokee; the body text font is Minion Pro and the caption font is Myriad Pro. The cover was designed by Editor Amanda Huff and features a canvas-like texture background with circles that signify the four major sections of the book, as well as a sketch of a lighthouse on the back cover.

The list of graduates printed in this book is the offical list of UMass Boston as of May 1, 2009. Erraneous listings and missing names are not the fault of the yearbook staff. As well, many middle names were shortened to initials for space and congruency.
